Spring has sprung at The Garden Shops and we have some fantastic seasonal items you’ll want to pick up for the garden lover in your life!

Like a beautiful silk scarf from Asian Eye to add that pop of color to any outfit – casual or upscale. These eye-catching pieces are based on traditional textiles and techniques found in India, which skilled craftspeople in America now lovingly create.

Or our ever popular cork handbags, wallets, jewelry and accessories that are vegan and eco-friendly. Cork is a natural shock absorber, so a sturdy iPhone case is a necessity for anyone who wants to protect their smart phones.

Bird watchers will go gaga over our handmade wool bird houses by dZi. For over 25 years, dZi has worked directly with over 1,000 Tibetan, Indian and Nepalese artisans to create, import and market designs that celebrate the beauty of the natural world and the amazing culture of Tibet. Birds really do dive in and make their nests in these unique (and snuggly) homes that are a perfect (and practical) adornment for any garden.

Be sure to stop by this Spring to see all of the fabulous items we have in stock this season. Best of all, a portion of your purchase goes directly toward funding the Garden.

Message from the Chair of the Board
San Diego Botanic Garden 2016 Year in Review

It is a pleasure to share key accomplishments made this past year here at the Garden in support of our Mission: “To inspire people of all ages to connect with plants and nature.” It has, indeed, been a banner year.

More than ever, people are realizing the benefits of regular access to nature. Clinical research shows that mental and physical health is improved when people get outside in natural settings. The San Diego Botanic Garden plays a vital role in providing this benefit to our visitors from around the globe as well as those from right here in Southern California.

One of our most impactful programs here at the Garden was the hosting of nearly 4,000 students on school trips to the Garden the past year, with 1,100 from underserved communities. According to Senior Youth Education Manager Susanne Brueckner, who heads our children/youth education programs, these children develop an appreciation for nature that is truly inspiring.

Our Dickinson Family Education Conservatory completed its groundbreaking event and construction is underway! We are excited to be raising funds for the final $411K to complete the $5.3M campaign for this building that integrates plants and people in a new way. We are so close, but we still need your help!

I cannot thank our volunteers enough for the 38,323 hours they have contributed this past year towards maintaining and operating the Garden! This is in comparison to 55,357 hours worked by our paid staff. We couldn’t be all that we are without our volunteers and we are so fortunate to have such a committed volunteer corps! I must say a special thank you to Roberta Dotson who has tirelessly run our gift shop for the past five years and must step back in 2017.

We were pleased to add more than 150 rare plants to our collection, in support of our conservation goals. All of the SDBG team’s efforts have been rewarded with a record 252,000 admissions, overall. Of these admissions, more than 10,831 entered free as part of once-a-month Free Tuesdays, giving access to nature that many might not otherwise afford. We hosted more than 25,000 guests for a variety of events offered at the Garden. We continued once again this year to showcase new sculptures in the Garden by displaying 52 sculptures created by 32 artists. As you likely know, we receive a percentage of each purchase made by our visitors and Garden friends.

Our goal of preserving our history was furthered with the release of docent Sally Sandler’s book, Sowing Seeds of Wonder, which details the early historic connections of SDBG. Sally has also curated the Larabee House Museum and displayed artifacts about the founding of this beautiful public garden. Her book opened the door for members of our founding family to come to the Garden for the first time.

Our annual meeting guest speaker was Dr. Meg Lowman, also known as “Canopy Meg” for her extensive research on the forest canopy. She energized attendees with her spirited presentation about the importance of preserving the forest canopy for our own continued survival. She looks forward to providing the Garden with her expertise as we plan our educational programming for the new conservatory, which features an unusual display of plants from the canopy.

I thank all of you who support this special place by donating your time, talent and treasure. You are part of the “village” that makes the Garden both go and grow! I hope to see you here in the Garden soon.

Sharon Lowe, SDBG Board Chair

EGYPTIAN AMBASSADOR VISITS THE GARDEN

Julian Duval, President/CEO of San Diego Botanic Garden, Ambassador Lamia Mekhemar, Consul General of Egypt (center) and Encinitas Mayor Catherine Blakespear stand in front of an Egyptian Tapestries Exhibit that was on display at the Garden from January through March 2017 in the Ecke Building. The exhibit brought people from near and far and many tapestries were sold to largely benefit the artists and the Ramses Wissa Wassef Art Centre in Egypt as well as the Garden. To learn more about these amazing tapestries, go to wissa-wassef-arts.com. Special thanks goes to curator Glenn Weiss who brought this engaging exhibit to the Garden after Julian saw some of these amazing pieces at a conference in Florida last year.

Please register by June 3.

Watercolor Pencil Botanical Journaling
(Ages 18+)
Sunday, June 11, 9:30 am – 4 pm
Pressing down pure color on paper leads to endless good vibes. We’ll combine watercolor pencils and water-soluble pens while learning clever user-friendly ways to draw. My drawing methods will ease those present inhibitions about drawing lines and shapes. Drawing flora is a delightful way to practice techniques with these pencils. Watercolor pencils are great for journals and for traveling. Colors become vibrant when water is applied to the paper surface. The effects range from smooth to textural with effortless brush strokes. We’ll also add some textures with stencils for a great mixed-media effect. Instructor: Helen Shafer Garcia.

Cost: Members $75, non-members $89. Fee includes special materials. Separate supply list will be e-mailed once registration is taken. Please register by June 4.

How Public Gardens Impact The World

And the questions we should ask as members of SDBG to determine our strategic vision in the years to come

By Clement Hamilton
Former President & CEO, Holden Forests & Gardens

Every so often, it is useful – and even fun! – to take stock of where an institution is headed, especially a nonprofit organization that enjoys tax-exempt status because its purpose is to improve the world. That innocuous (and even corny-sounding) phrase, “improve the world!” is what I have found to be the best starting point for planning and evaluating an organization’s mission and strategic foundation.

Recently, I joined San Diego Botanic Garden’s board and management team in a full-day strategic retreat, which was an honor and pleasure for me because I have enjoyed following your remarkable progress over the years, and have long admired Julian Duval’s leadership. We thought about public gardens in general, to provide context for SDBG, and here are some ideas I shared.

In establishing a visionary and strategic foundation, it’s not about the numbers of visitors we engage, how many species and cultivars of plants we display, how many schoolchildren we reach, how much botanical research we publish, how much produce we raise in community gardens, or how we contribute to the protection and stewardship of our region's natural areas. Those are the means to an end. Rather I believe our fundamental question is: “How does the world improve as a result of the actions we take?” Only after deciding that, should we tackle the practical matter of, what should we do to most effectively bring our world-vision to fruition?

There are many ways public gardens impact the world, and no two gardens have the same emphasis or balance. Overall, I think of a garden’s potential “impact areas” as falling into seven categories: livability of cities (beauty, low crime, environmental justice); green infrastructure (air and water quality, stormwater management, fire control, efficient use of energy and water, slope stability); conservation of biodiversity and natural ecosystem health; plant awareness and literacy; gardening; plant products (agriculture, sustainable logging, forest farming); and human health (both mental and physical). That’s a lot of potential impact, and no one institution can tackle it all!

In deciding which “impact areas” to pursue, I like to ask essentially three questions: (1) What are the most consequential societal needs that a garden can help address, in the region it seeks to impact? (2) Are there good collaborative partners, to help achieve success? And (3) what are your garden’s comparative advantages, that portend success in any particular impact area?

For instance, at Holden Forests & Gardens we see northeast Ohio’s forests threatened by climate change, invasive plants and pests, pollution, and imprudent forest management. We also see Cleveland falling far short of its old nickname, the Forest City, which affects overall livability and the infrastructural function of the city. And we also see schoolchildren growing up without appreciation for the importance of plants, and largely without the ability to reason scientifically, which is to say rationally. So it should be no surprise we have chosen the four impact themes of biodiversity, green infrastructure, sustainable land use, and plant and environmental literacy; and each of our activities must serve one or more of those themes.

In deciding which directions to select, the beauty is, there are no wrong answers. Society is chock full of ways we can have positive impact. All of you, as SDBG members, are partners in the San Diego Botanic Garden’s wonderful present, and its inspiring evolution into the future, in whatever direction it takes. Thank you for all you do.

Dr. Hamilton is a plant taxonomist and ecologist who is bringing to a close 25 years of public garden leadership, from Seattle to Claremont to Chicago to Cleveland.
Ruth and Charles Larabee were the unique couple who turned 26 acres of Southern California chaparral, now known as San Diego Botanic Garden, into something spectacular during their tenure in the 1940s and 50s and bestowed it to the public in 1957. With the publication last year of the book entitled Sowing Seeds of Wonder: The Stories of Ruth and Charles Larabee and the Origins of San Diego Botanic Garden, additional information surfaced to expand and complete their remarkable stories. This information reveals more about why they may have come to California, how they developed the land, and their far-reaching personal interests, which extended way beyond gardening.

The move to California had roots in their earliest days together.

The question of why the Larabees left their comfortable home, jobs and families in Kansas City in 1943 to move to coastal California has always been a curiosity. While we can still only guess at their motives, recent findings provide some foundation for this radical move: the fact is, the Larabees were actually returning to Southern California in 1943, having previously lived there during their first year of marriage 17 years before.

When Ruth and Charles married after her graduation from Vassar in 1926, they immediately headed west to live with his widowed mother May Larabee and his sister Angeline in Hollywood. In letters to her father Charles Baird, Ruth alluded to her husband's "good business judgement," though she never mentioned specifically what his business plan entailed. In short time they arranged to move to Culver City, "to be closer to his work." At one point, she told her father, “The Italian has left,” and later, “Charles and I slept in the factory last night, in order for him to learn to use the dryers.” Again we are left with speculation about his exact occupation based on these cryptic references. However, it's possible to conclude that Larabee may have been in textile manufacturing, during a time when the fashion and fabric industries were on the rise in Los Angeles.

Whatever the case, Ruth and Charles stayed in the Los Angeles area for only a year, then returned to Kansas City in 1943 to move to Culver City, "to be closer to his work." At one point, she told her father, “The Italian has left,” and later, “Charles and I slept in the factory last night, in order for him to learn to use the dryers.” Again we are left with speculation about his exact occupation based on these cryptic references. However, it's possible to conclude that Larabee may have been in textile manufacturing, during a time when the fashion and fabric industries were on the rise in Los Angeles.

Meanwhile, Ruth was actively engaged in gardening, too, they were known to have truckloads of cacti and succulents from Mexico brought in to what she named “El Rancho San Ysidro del las Flores.” By 1957, when Ruth deeded the property to the County, those areas of the ranch that were landscaped were botanical showstoppers, lavishly planted with over 200 different species selected for their ability to survive in the local climate and conditions.

Additionally, the Larabees had a head start in landscape development thanks to the previous owner, an experienced avocado rancher named Anton van Amersfoort, who actually lived here for 20 years (six years longer than the Larabees). He was responsible for planting a host of trees that still stand today, among them the giant Torrey pines. He also planted a long allée of Monterey cypress trees, cultivated avocados, and brought irrigation infrastructure to the ranch. The road now named Quail Gardens Drive was initially Amersfoort Drive. To be sure, this industrious Dutchman deserves his rightful place in the history of San Diego Botanic Garden.

Ruth did indeed leave the ranch to become a nurse in Mexico.

In 1957, apparently out of strong personal need, Ruth Larabee hastily packed all her possessions into the barn at El Rancho San Ysidro de las Flores and left for Puebla, Mexico, where she commenced training as a nurse. For years she had volunteered her help and support to the struggling populations south of the border. Now free of the ranch responsibilities, she spent five years as a registered nurse in the Baptist mission Hospital Latino Americana, undertaking the training and strenuous work at the age of 53. It was during this period, deprived of much of her tonic of the outdoors, that she looked upon previous times in her life and reflected, “The greatest satisfaction in my disordered life has come from my contact with nature.”

Flower Fairy Camp

July 3, 5, 6 & 7 (4 days) • 9 am – 12 noon
Ages: 7 - 10

Each day we will work on building our own fairy house to take home. For that, we will go on walks through different areas of the garden to collect natural material. Along the way we will find enchanted places to take a break and listen to flower fairy poems. We will make a flower fairy crown for ourselves, and of course, will build all the “furniture” for our fairy house from natural materials. On Friday we will wear our fairy crowns and have a dress-up day. Space is limited to 20 campers. Go to SDBGarden.org or call 760/ 436-3036 x201 to reserve your space today! For questions please e-mail SOW@SDBGarden.org.

Cost: Members $108 / 4 days
Non-Members $120 / 4 days.

Snap Shot – Nature Photography

July 10 – 14 (5 days) • 9 am – 12 noon
Ages: 7 - 10

This camp will focus on appreciating the beauty of plants in the Garden around us. Students will tour different areas of the Garden each day and will focus on taking pictures of flowers, trees, insects, and using plants as a backdrop for portraits. Throughout the week campers will also create their very own photo album to take home. Students need to provide their own digital camera or smart phone. Space is limited to 20 campers. Go to SDBGarden.org or call 760/ 436-3036 x 201 to reserve your space today! For questions please e-mail SOW@SDBGarden.org.

Cost: Members $135 / 5 days
Non-Members $150 / 5 days.

Art and Garden Adventure Camp

July 11 – 15 (5 days) • 9 am – 12 noon
Ages: 7 - 10

Each day students will explore different areas of the Garden to find inspiration for their art projects. We will paint on canvas, decorate clay animals, do sand art, and make our own survival bracelet. We will also go on exciting Scavenger Hunts, play games, and build a hydroponics unit to take home. Space is limited to 20 campers. Go to SDBGarden.org or call 760/ 436-3036 x 201 to reserve your space today! For questions please e-mail SOW@SDBGarden.org.

Cost: Members $135 / 5 days
Non-Members $150 / 5 days.

Ruth and Charles each had compelling interests beyond gardening.

For years, much has been understood about Ruth Larabee’s unique strengths and interests. We’ve known about the Girl Scout and Camp Fire troops she sponsored, her rather heroic fortitude following her divorce, her generous gift of land to the County, her self-abasing turn at nursing, her trail-blazing presence, and the modest life style she pursued despite her wealth. The image of Charles Larabee, on the other hand, has been relatively incomplete.

New information fleshes out the portrait of Charles Wright Larabee (1901-1968), a man of considerable depth and substance. His black and white photographs developed in the 1930s and 40s earned him recognition for the insight and sensitivity he brought to scenes in South and Central America, Mexico, and the American Southwest. He guided a troop of Senior Explorer Scouts in Encinitas on some of the greatest adventures of their lives, for which he was dearly loved and admired. His personal curiosity, appreciation of nature, and quest for knowledge led him down the Colorado River on a two-month river trip in 1940 with a small group of quasi-pioneers. He personally paid for a college education for 12 young men, sponsored through the Encinitas Rotary, of which he was a lifetime member. And perhaps most notably, many of Charles Larabee’s values were influenced by his friendship with the legendary Ernest Thompson Seton, an icon of environmentalism, a leading nature writer and illustrator, and a seminal figure in the emergence of the American conservation philosophy in the early twentieth century.

January Volunteer of the Month: TIM JARA

Tim’s father moved to San Diego in 1939 to join the Marine Corps and, as the youngest of six children, he is a lifelong resident! Tim met his wife, Pam, when they were both students at San Diego State University and they were married in 1984. A retired Navy pilot, Tim currently works for the U.S. Navy at Space and Naval Warfare Systems Command (SPAWAR) on computer and communication programs. Working outdoors and gardening are key personal interests and he completed a major overhaul of his yard in 2007. Pam became a Garden Volunteer first and, after he helped at one of our Gala events, Tim signed up in 2012. Tim enjoys working with all of the wonderful people at the Garden and seeing the beauty of a garden area after their work is done. He especially likes being with Barry and Mary and the rest of the Saturday Bamboo Team. He describes them as the best team anyone could ask for!

February Volunteer of the Month: CANDY SHARDA

Originally from Akron, Ohio, Candy also met her husband, Satish, there. They have one son, Kevin. Candy has had a diverse career ranging from retail clothing, cosmetics, and teaching preschool, to chemical dependency counseling. She moved to Del Mar five years ago and became interested in gardening after viewing the many California native flowers and succulents. Candy learned of the Garden from Patti Fitchen and started volunteering after taking a Succulent Wreath class. That experience led to her joining the Wreath Team and she especially enjoys “hanging with my wreath team on Mondays!” Candy contributes her time and talents during special events and has been a Gala Silent Auction Committee member for the last two years. What Candy most enjoys about the Garden is seeing it all lit up during the holiday season at Garden of Lights.

March Volunteer of the Month: PATTI FITCHEN

Patti is a native Californian who grew up and attended University of California, Santa Barbara. She has a PhD in French Language and Literature and met her husband during graduate school. They spent time in Europe before settling in Santa Cruz where Patti taught French Language, Civilization and Cinema for 30 years. When her husband retired in 2004, they moved to Encinitas to be near one of their daughters and three of their six grandchildren. After taking a Succulent Wreath class at the Garden in 2006, Patti joined the team of devoted women who create wreaths and topiaries for the Gift Shop. Over the years, Patti has volunteered in Admissions and at special events and enjoys leading children’s tours. What she loves most about our Garden is that it is alive and dynamic, always changing, never the same. There is always something new to discover, to uncover, to learn. Like Cleopatra, “Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale her infinite variety!”

Volunteer at the Garden!

Join us at our next volunteer orientation where you’ll meet interesting people, learn about our beautiful Garden, and find out how to get more involved. Won’t you join us? Our next Volunteer Orientation Meeting is Friday, May 19, 9:30 am – 12 pm. RSVP or direct questions to Jill Gardner at jgardner@sdbgarden.org or by calling 760/ 436-3036 x213.

Docent Meetings – Everyone Welcome

First Wednesday of the Month

9:30 am – 12 pm

Arrive at 11 am for the program

April 5: Come and learn about Sam the giant Galapagos Tortoise, the Garden’s biggest goodwill ambassador. Leslie Duval will enlighten us on the Duval’s very special relationship with Sam.

A heartwarming story of true friendship lost and found inspired Leslie to write a children’s book, “Too Big to Lose.” Proceeds from book sales benefit the San Diego Botanic Garden to help care for Sam who might live another 100 years!

May 3: Meet Yvonne Savio, a master gardener, who comes to us from Pasadena. She has a weekly blog called Gardening in LA. For 36 years she worked for the University of California in the horticulture field, helping to revitalize the Los Angeles County Master Garden Program. Yvonne has traveled abroad, visiting many famous gardens and events. She will share her love of English gardens and the famous Chelsea Flower Show at our Docent Meeting.

June 7: Come and enjoy our Docent Potluck with all your friends at the Garden.
Thanks to our Benefactor Members

More than 130 upper-level annual members and corporate sponsors were honored at our festive Benefactor Dinner in December. The San Dieguito Garden Club (SDGC), once again, decorated areas inside and outside of the tent exquisitely! The Garden was a sparkling show of many twinkling lights that kicked off the holiday season for all.

Guests enjoyed sumptuous hors d’oeuvres and a delicious three-course dinner created and served by SDBG corporate sponsor, Continental Catering. Entertainment was provided by renowned harpist, Mary Fawcett. At the end of the evening, guests took home their 2016 botanic ceramic tile, crafted by local artist Rae Holton in recognition of their annual contribution to the Garden.

To learn more about Benefactor Memberships or to join today, contact Josh or Bella from our Membership Team at 760/ 436-3036 (Josh x214 and Bella x215). Our special thanks to Geri Thirloway and her SDGC committee for helping make this a lovely night to remember!

Our Benefactor members enjoyed an evening of great food, wine and fellowship and received a 2016 Benefactor Tile!

Gift Ideas for Birthdays and Mother’s and Father’s Days

Choosing a gift for a friend or loved one can be challenging! Often, you really cannot think of a material thing the person wants or needs. The Garden can help!

We offer gift certificates for membership that come with a lovely photographic greeting card you can personalize. The membership period does not begin until the certificate is redeemed. This is a gift your loved one will remember all year long. Memberships start as low as $45 for an individual and $85 for a family. Call our Membership Team at 760/ 436-3036 x215 or x214 to find out more today.

A commemorative tile is another great gift for a loved one or entire family. These tiles will be installed in front of the new Dickinson Family Education Conservatory, currently under construction and set to open in late 2017. There are several options and costs range from $250 to $5,000. What a lovely way to honor your loved one into perpetuity! To learn more about purchasing a tile, contact Susan at 760/ 436-3036 x217.

As a nonprofit organization, your gifts help us continue our mission to inspire people of all ages to connect with plants and nature by supporting our programs, facilities and operations.
Thank You Donors

San Diego Botanic Garden wishes to thank the following donors for cash and in-kind gifts, including Benefactor and Larabee Society memberships made between October 31, 2016 and January 31, 2017.

If you see an error, our sincere apologies! Please reach out to Carolyn at 760/436-3036 x216 or email her at czollars@sdbgarden.org. We will be sure to recognize you properly in the next issue. Thank you!

Ron Moss
Arbor Vitae Guild Member

By Carolyn Zollars

I recently sat down and interviewed Arbor Vitae Guild (AVG) member, Ron Moss. I was curious to find out why he decided to name San Diego Botanic Garden as a beneficiary in his will which is how people join the Guild. Ron shared that a close friend introduced him to the Garden, someone he had known for many years after working together. That friend was none other than Frances Hamilton White. It was Frances who introduced Ron and his wife, Joan, to the Garden in 1999. They were immediately taken by the idea of the Seeds of Wonder Garden, the mini prototype for the much larger children’s garden opened on the northern end of campus in 2009 and named Hamilton Children’s Garden, in honor of Frances.

Ron had a successful career in corporate finance. So, when it comes to investing his charitable dollars, he needs to know that the proper planning, controls and management are in place. He feels that the Garden has done and continues to do this well. Ron also is very passionate about knowing an impact is being made on people. He is impressed with the multitude of programs for people of all ages at the SDBG. He appreciates that visitors can see plants from diverse climates around the world, especially important for those who do not travel to places like China to see a collection of bamboo. Most of all, though, Ron shared, “It always makes me happy to see the children playing in the Garden and people of all ages enjoying themselves.”

Guild members need not provide the Garden the details about this future gift. They are recognized at our special Benefactor’s Dinner held annually in the Garden and are listed on an elegant glass sign located in the Lawn Garden and in Quail Tracks, unless no name recognition is preferred.

To learn more about the Arbor Vitae Guild, contact Carolyn at 760/436-3036, x216 or via email her at czollars@sdbgarden.org.

Gala in the Garden!
Saturday, Sept. 9, 2017

We are busy preparing for what will be the best Gala in the Garden... ever! Food, wine and spirits are served throughout the meandering pathways of the Garden. Musical groups and strolling entertainers will be performing along the way. You will enjoy beautiful floral creations and a lovely sunset sky during the evening.

We hear from our guests again and again, “This is the best gala I have ever attended! There's not another one like it.”

Contact Doreen Prager at dprager@sdbgarden.org to learn more about volunteering, donating items/services for the silent/live auctions or how to become a sponsor.
Become a Corporate Partner TODAY!

As a Corporate Partner, you will receive recognition on our website and on signage in the Garden, invitations to special events, and other attractive benefits for each level of support. For information on how your organization can support the Garden as a Corporate Partner, please contact Doreen Prager at 760.436.3036 x 218 or by email at dprager@sdbgarden.org.

Our Appreciation to our Corporate Partners

We thank our corporate and foundation partners for their annual support of the Garden’s mission to inspire people of all ages to connect with plants and nature. These organizations provide unrestricted cash or in-kind contributions, which fund our educational programs and the overall care and maintenance of our 37-acre beautiful botanical oasis. Be sure to patronize our Corporate Partners!
